Claims 21 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 18-20, 22-31 and 41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Squires.

In regard to claims 18-30 22-31 and 41 are Squires discloses a device and method of stretching (see Figs. 5 and 6) wherein the user places a lower end of a rod on the ground, grips the rod with both hands assumes a position (no golf ball claimed) and moves their arms to a position while keeping the lower end of the rod on the ground. (see fig. 5D).

Squires teaches a method of use wherein an instructor instructs a user to move the pole, while maintaining the end of the pole in contact with a support surface while stretching. To move the pole from side to side would have been obvious, so as to stretch the torso muscle of a user.

Claim 25 is obvious in view of Fig. 6D.

In regard to claim 26, the device of Squires discloses the option of placing a user's hand one on top of another, to place the opposite hand on top of the other would have been obvious given whether the person is right or left handed or however a user feels comfortable.

Art Unit: 3764

In regard to claim 27 note that the users arms are straight in figs. 6D and 5D.

In regard to claim 31 the examiner notes that to hold onto a pole member and to, stretch is obvious in view of the figs. of Squires. The examiner also notes that to place a users hand on their hips while stretching is notoriously old and well known, also obvious in the art.

Claims 35 and 40 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Squires in view of Lee.

In regard to claims 35 and 40 the examiner notes that to manufacture user manipulated poles as being extensible is known and obvious note the extensible poles of Lee.

Claims 36, 38 and 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Squires in view of Lee and Dunn.

In regard to claim 36 the examiner notes that tapered handles are obvious and known in the art in view of the tapered handles of Dunn. Handle are known to be tapered so as comfortably fit into the hand of a users.

In regard to claim 38 note the shoes (12) of Squires. Shoes of this sort are known to be manufactured of rubber.

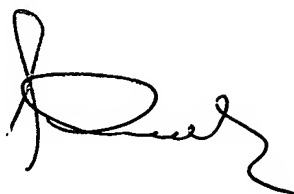

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Note the overall poles of Jones. Note the length adjustable pole of Trifaro et al
